

Dr. Markus Schmidt

Born in Vienna, Austria. Educational background: biomedical engineering, biology and safety research. PhD from the University of Vienna, Austria. Working area: public perception, risk communication and management of genetically modified (GM) crops, genetic erosion, genetic resources, synthetic biology and nanotechnology. Selected experience: biosafety and risk assessment of GM crops in developing countries (southern Africa, China), public risk perception study on environmental, health and social risks (Austria, China), sustainable use of plant genetic resources for food and agriculture, contribution to an Austrian report on the ethical legal and social aspects of nanotechnology, biosafety of synthetic biology.